

One Book at a Time

One of the best ways to read the Bible is a complete book at a time. Most of the books in this inspired library are short stories requiring less than an hour to read. Even the longest ones can easily be read in one afternoon sitting. Try reading a book from beginning to end without interruption. Or read it with a friend, out loud, alternating a chapter at a time. Why not get together with a group of friends and have a read-a-thon on a weekend? In one ten-hour day you could read half of the New Testament!

The following list is an accurate record of the amount of time it takes the average reader to read each book of the Bible out loud at a moderately slow pace. Each estimate is rounded up to the nearest five-minute interval. Many people will read these books at a faster pace, requiring less time. You can do it—so just do it! Put a check mark next to each book as you complete it.
